Character Study:

South Gives the Nation the Bird

Perhaps like myself you have long admired the venerable Saturday Evening Post for its humorous and charming articles on American life — if so, you already know what I'm going to say.

The current issue, April 5, carries a feature by Greer Williams headlined "Smartest Bird That Tweets." And the report is that a bird "sings like Caruso, dances expertly, makes love magnificently — and will fight anything that flies, walks, or creeps."

Who is this romantic rascal? Why leave it to an audacious Yankee journal to start telling Southerners anything new about their celebrated mockingbird. Nevertheless, SEP comes up with some facts I didn't know — and this editorial import has been kicking around the South a good many years.

The Post remarks that while the mockingbird used to live in the South exclusively he is today distributed over most of the United States. One male bird arrived in Maine in November, defied the rigors of a New England winter — and then wrote back home for his mate, who came up in February. I, who shoveled snow as a boy in northern Pennsylvania, have new respect for the mockingbird.

Magazine accounts of all the birds and animals the mocker has imitated are, of course, old stuff to Southerners. But not being a native son I, for one, didn't know until SEP pointed it out, that in olden times the mockingbird rivaled the canary as a household pet. The Post says that as late as the 1880's a good singer sold for $7 to $15. I suppose somebody can explain why folks switched to canaries — but I won't go into that.

Most amusing part of the SEP piece is the account of the time Edward W. Bok built his famous Singing Tower near Lake Wales, Fla., and thought it would be nice to import some European nightingales to help out his music festival. The foreigners sounded off in their cages, the Florida mockingbirds picked it up on the downbeat — and the show had no sooner got started at the Bok Tower than it was also "on the road."

But the magazine researchers never let well enough alone. Author Williams comes up with the report that Septimus Winner was a Southerner, and wrote "Listen to the Mockingbird" without ever having heard one.

I suppose that's why Mr. Mockingbird went North in our time — a character in search of an author.

Texarkana Show Promoted Nationally

The Texarkana Kennel club's third annual AKC Championship Show, scheduled Thursday, May 8, at the Four States Fair Grounds, is featured in the April issue of Dog World — with mention of Hope as a participating town.

Show chairman is Gray J. Osborne, Jr., of Keokuk, Texas, assisted by Mrs. Osborne. Show superintendents are Moss & Mulvey, and the judges Louis J. Murr and Mrs. Marion Mangrum — with $700 in cash prizes at the finals.

The Texarkana-Hope area has been further publicized by distribution of 4,000 copies of the official show program.

Proceeding the show date May 8 there will be a dinner for the judges Wednesday night, May 7, at 7 p.m., at the Coffee Cup in Texarkana, sponsored by the Texarkana Kennel club and the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

In order to get show dogs at their case in the arena, the Fine Arts building at the Fair grounds, where the exhibit is to be held, will be opened for public use the two Sundays immediately preceding the show date. Dog owners or trainers are invited to try out their arrivals at the building beginning at 2 p.m. Sunday, April 27, and Sunday, May 4.

Occupations Class Visits Meyer's Baking Plant

The high school students of Horace Hubbard's occupations class visited Meyer's Bakery Friday afternoon. O. B. Hays, Production Manager for Meyer's Bakeries, conducted the students on the tour of the local plant.

Mr. Hays pointed out that there are many opportunities in the baking industries for young men particularly. The group was told that Meyer's is experimenting with the production of an entirely new type of loaf here in this plant.

The students learned a great deal about another of Hope's industries and expressed appreciation for the fine cooperation from Meyer's Bakery.

This is the second in a series of tours through Hope's industries. The group visited Bruner-Ivory Handle Company on Thursday and will visit Shenhouse next week.

Proteins are found in all living cells.

Jury Convicts Costello, Faces 10 Years, Fine

New York, April 5 (AP) — Swarthy, croaky-voiced Frank Costello, who twice stalked out of a Senate crime committee hearing rather than answer questions, was convicted last night of contempt of the United States Senate.

The 61-year-old gambler and underworld figure, who four times previously beat government efforts to put him behind bars, faces a possible maximum sentence of 10 years in prison — plus $10,000 in fines. He was continued in $5,000 bail pending sentencing Tuesday.

Government Prosecutor Myles J. Lane, who finally tripped the Italian-born racketeer, hailed the jury's guilty verdict as a "turning point" — and said it was proof that no man "no matter how cunning or powerful he might seem to be, could be bigger than the government itself."

The usually calm and poised Costello, visibly shaken by the verdict, had "nothing to say."

These were his words to newsmen as he rose unsteadily to his feet after the jury had reported its decision. The jury deliberated 5-12 hours.

The jury, itself, had undergone some shuffling around by the judge in a dramatic last-hour development in the case. Judge Sylvester J. Ryan had fired two of the jurors — and called in alternates.

One of the ousted jurors was the foreman, Mrs. Helen Louise Mason, a Negro housewife.

She told newsmen later that Judge Ryan had accused her of being involved in a $250 deal to deadlock the jury, and prevent a verdict.

She called the whole thing "ridiculous."

The judge himself said his interview with her in his chambers had been "inaccurately reported," but he did not make public any account of his own.

"After the case had been given to the jury, Costello's counsel, Attorney Kenneth M. Spence, sought a retrial of the entire case because of the reshuffled jury."

The motion was denied — but Spence will argue a motion for a mistrial when Costello is brought into court for sentencing.

Costello's lawyers called no witnesses during the trial that ended last night and offered no final summation of its case.

They contended that there were no questions for the jury to decide — that there were only matters properly to be ruled on by the court.

The 16-count contempt charge against Costello emanated from his two "walk-outs" during the New York hearings of the widely televised Kefauver committee hearings in March, 1951, and his stubborn refusal to answer specific questions put to him by committee counsel Rudolph Halley.

Authorities report that the vaccination of at least 80 per cent of the dogs in an area has proved its worth in controlling rabies. In Hempstead county this has been especially true. The control of vagrant dogs is an essential part in the program.

In planning the program for 1952 the voluntary leaders ask the cooperation of all dog owners and livestock owners. In addition to protection of the dog protection is afforded for valuable livestock and the health and savings of our family and friends.

This year's vaccination will be done by Dr. Herbert Rogers DVM of Hope and Dr. Jack Ambrose DVM of Nashville. Dr. Rogers doing all work except that in communities adjacent to Nashville. The following schedule was prepared as a convenience to all areas of the county.

McMath, Wells Real Parties in Purchase Fight

Little Rock, April 5 (AP) — The parade of witnesses will be resumed Monday in the suit seeking to prevent a popular vote on the 1951 purchasing act.

Attorneys argued points of procedure before the full Supreme Court yesterday.

During yesterday's session, an attorney for the two Pulaski County taxpayers who filed the suit said that the "real parties" in the suit were Gov. McMath and John F. Wells, a Little Rock publisher.

Wells spearheaded the referendum movement. The act was sponsored in the legislature by McMath administration forces.

Following this statement by Edgar Bethell, a Ft. Smith attorney, the court:

(1) Authorized Special Commissioner Wayne Upton to take evidence in all counties of the state, rather than in Pulaski county alone; (2) Denied a request by the plaintiffs for a summary judgment in behalf of the two Pulaski county taxpayers, W. E. Davidson and H. H. Ellis; (3) rejected a plaintiffs' request that Wells be named a party to the suit; (4) Ruled that until a further order by the court, the hearings would continue under the present indefinite bond, posted by administration forces; (5) Authorized Upton to decide on whether signatures on affidavits were admissible as evidence. The affidavits in question are from persons who said their true signatures did not appear on the documents.

(6) Denied a motion to intervene by Rep. Charles Smith of Crittenden county. Smith's motion sought to have costs incurred by state employees in preparing the case charged to the bondsmen.

New York, April 5 (AP) — I am a retired fat man.

I used to be round and firm and fully packed. I used to be able to crowd a one-way street. When I stepped on the scales, they didn't just weigh me. They said "ouch!"

But I was a walking porpoise on purpose. I enjoyed being fat. When I laughed I had twice as much fun as a thin man, because there was so much more of me there ready and able to have a good time.

All this is past. The suits I busted out of yesterday now hang upon me in folds. Where I used to bulge I now sag and wrinkle. I'm not exactly the thin man — but I'm on my way.

Why did I give up the happy, self-satisfied, carefree life of a fat man to join the miserable millions of dieting Americans?

Well, to make a clean breast of it, there were two reasons.

First, I was lonely — overwhelmed by loneliness. All my friends were on a diet. All my enemies were on a diet. I began to feel I was the only fat man left in the world. I had nothing to talk about because there was nothing wrong with me. I just was stout and happy — But they don't allow that anymore.

The second reason I went on a diet is because of my life insurance company. I just hated to go on worrying them. And they were worrying all right. They began putting ads in the magazines and newspapers saying that fat people don't live as long as not-so-fat people, that fat people don't rally so well from illness.

Have my own theory about that. It is this. Fat people who behave like this. Fat people ought to behave — that is, those who take life slow and easy and one star at a time — live a long while. But fat people who try to act like thin people die young. It is that simple. One of the reasons a whale lives so long is that it doesn't play tennis.

Put my life insurance company kept on putting out these uneasy bulletins against blubber, and finally I began to feel they were pointed at me. I suspected they had a vice-president-in-charge-of worrying about Boyle. Well, who wants to cause a life insurance company all that bother? They wouldn't change their policy — so I changed mine.

I went on a diet, like so many millions of people are doing. I took off 17 pounds. It was very easy. Folks like to dream up complicated diets to lose weight, but that is all unnecessary.

The quickest, safest and most healthful way to lose weight is to quit eating what you like and eat what you don't like. My formula:

1. Eat what you don't like. 2. Eat what you don't like. 3. Eat what you don't like. 4. Eat what you don't like. 5. Eat what you don't like. 6. Eat what you don't like. 7. Eat what you don't like. 8. Eat what you don't like. 9. Eat what you don't like. 10. Eat what you don't like.

Van Fleet's Son Missing in Action

Seoul, Korea, April 5 (AP) — Lt. James A. Van Fleet Jr., son of the U. S. Eighth Army commander, today was listed by the U. S. Fifth Air Force as missing in action.

The Air Force said he failed to return yesterday morning from his third night bombing mission over North Korea.

The 26-year-old Van Fleet was piloting a B-26 light bomber. He arrived in Korea only three weeks ago and was assigned to a B-26 squadron based a short distance from his father's headquarters.

The young lieutenant, a West Point graduate, saw his father for the first time in 15 months on March 19—the general's 60th birthday.

The lieutenant is Gen. Van Fleet's only son. The general has a married daughter.

General Van Fleet told newsmen the day he and his son were reunited that "I tried like the devil to bring Jim up with the Doughboys."

"I wanted him to be a combat infantryman, but Jim said the Army is too slow for him. The youth of America loves the air. This is the Jet age."

It is something on your plate that looks good, throw it away. They eat what is left.

The things I hate most in the world to eat are fish, lamb and fresh vegetables of any kind. So that is what I eat, and — ugh! — I wish I could take it intravenously. I defy anybody to eat enough fish, lamb and fresh vegetables to get fat.

Sloughing of those 17 pounds has made a big change in my life. It is pleasant again to hear the girls whistle at me as I pass by and murmur "There goes Tiger Man."

I look better and feel better and I know my life insurance company now is relaxing. Secretly, I guess the company is kind of proud of me.

But I do miss the comfortable, self-satisfied feeling that fat gives a fellow. And I am just about as lonely as ever. Because all my friends and enemies want to talk about diets. . . diets. . . diets.

And anybody who can go on talking about fish, lamb, and fresh vegetables is just plain hard up for conversation.

Peddlers Paid But Had No Influence

Washington, April 5 (AP) — Sen. Huey P. Long said today his senate investigation of war surplus property deals may show that peddlers often get paid for influence they don't possess.

His investigations subcommittee, at the request of Jess Larson, general services administrator, is looking into the government's vast disposal program to see if Larson handled it properly.

Larson, as the lead-off witness in the inquiry, told the subcommittee yesterday "I run a situation" in which businessmen feel it wise "to employ either influence or special knowledge in dealing with the government."

He said the reasoning of businessmen who pay big fees for influence "is beyond my comprehension."

They, whose subcommittee frequently has denounced what it termed improper use of political influence and favoritism in government deals, said this inquiry may show that "often business people pay fees for influence to men who have no influence to sell."

The subcommittee said it plans to ask Frank Nathan, a Pittsburgh promoter, to declare under oath what was he did to earn $92,000 it says he received on three deals involving the sale of surplus government property.

Larson swore he had no knowledge at the time he approved the sales that Nathan was to receive any fees on the three deals. He described Nathan as a man with "a habit of dropping the names of people around in public conversations" and representing them as his friends.

He said he repeatedly told Nathan to stop indicating that "he was closely associated with me" but that Nathan was "a persistent man, a very persistent man."

In opening the hearing yesterday, Huey said staff investigators have uncovered "no evidence x x x that he (Larson) had received any improper income or made any improper financial gains" in public office.

On that account, he said, the group would not give public airing to Larson's financial affairs.

Acting Chief

Ft. Smith, April 4 (AP) — Lt. Bill Rodgers is the acting chief of police here.

Rodgers, senior lieutenant on the Ft. Smith force, was named yesterday to succeed Chief Pink Shaw, who resigned last Monday.

ELIMINATE LAW

Tokyo, April 4 (AP) — The Japanese Parliament today eliminated an occupation law—daylight savings time.

Some observers said the action may be an indication of what will happen, after the peace treaty is effective, to other laws imposed by occupation forces.

Attorneys to Pick New Judge

Newport, April 5 (AP) — Lawyers from the third judicial circuit were to meet here today to select nominees for a successor to the late Circuit Judge Milledard G. Hardin of Newport.

The lawyers were to recommend three names to Gov. McMath. The governor may — although he is not required to — appoint a lawyer to serve in the circuit judgeship until Dec. 31 from among those named.

Someone to fill the remaining two years of Hardin's unexpired term will be nominated and elected at this year's Democratic primaries and general election. The appointee will be ineligible under the law.

Eighth District Chancellor Andrew G. Ponder of Newport is serving in his position by appointment until end of the year. He was named after Chancellor J. Paul Ward of Batesville became an associate justice of the Arkansas Supreme Court Jan. 1, 1931.

A chancellor to fill the remainder of Ward's unexpired term — also two years — will be nominated and elected this year. Under Arkansas law Ponder is not eligible to seek the position through election.

Kefauver in Bid for Votes in New York

New York, April 5 (AP) — Sen. Estes Kefauver apparently has made a formal bid for New York State's 50-man delegation to the Democratic presidential convention.

The Tennessee senator met yesterday with Paul E. Fitzpatrick, State Democratic Committee chairman.

Later, at a news conference, Kefauver was asked if the meeting meant his bid for New York's support, and the senator replied: "You would be wrong."

Fitzpatrick could not be reached for comment.

After President Truman bowed out of the political picture, Fitzpatrick said the state would support a favorite son, leaving it free to swing its weight later in the convention balloting.

New York delegates formally pledged to the presidential convention. The primary will be held April 22.

Kefauver, besides appearing on two television programs yesterday, also addressed 250 young Democrats.

During his speech he said he favors fair employment practices — but through voluntary means.

"I am not convinced that a national compulsory commission is the best approach," he said.

The remark was greeted with silence.

If the Democratic platform contains a compulsory FEPC plank, Kefauver continued, "I shall whole-

DOROTHY DIX

Leave Mom Alone

Dear Dorothy Dix: Although she is the best in the world, my mother-in-law presents a problem. My husband and I live with her and we are all very happy. This is the trouble. Although we (including me) have charge accounts at the best stores in town, she likes to go shopping in the cheaper stores. Then the clerks call her "mom," and it is very embarrassing to me when I'm with her. We never even call her "mom" at home; she's always been "mother" to my husband and me.

Am I right in trying to persuade her to shop in the better stores where she is treated with respect? Or should I let her patronize the places she likes, where she is addressed so familiarly? I had a particularly annoying experience this morning while in a store with her, which I wish I simply had to write about. My mother-in-law has been kinder to me than anyone in my own family and I wouldn't want to hurt her for the world, yet I feel she is doing herself an injustice by not expecting more courtesy when she is shopping.

Answer: While I can readily understand how upsetting this situation is to a young, dignified bride, I cannot recommend your changing it. Your mother-in-law is entitled to shop where and how she likes under the circumstances given. You'd have more cause for complaint if she patronized the ultra-expensive shops in town and sent the charge account bills skyrocketing.

Likes Informality

Perhaps it is the very warmth and informality of the treatment she receives in her favorite stores that appeals to her. She may be tired of being treated with the formality accorded her at home, and the shopping tours provide a welcome change. Do you give her the warm affection that she craves? Respected and admired, she has plenty, I can see that, but perhaps she wants something more. Why not stop addressing her stiffly as "mother" and use the warmer, "mom?"

You so obviously want to please this woman who has been so kind and good to you that I have no hesitation in urging you to leave her alone in this one oddity, and let her shop where she pleases.

There may be many things in her mind that are more satisfied in a simple store atmosphere than in an elegant salon. The aloofness of super-trained salesladies simply does not appeal to her nature, and it's foolish to force it on her. If you are embarrassed by being with her on a shopping trip, why not let her go alone? If you must go, don't take it too seriously. Look for bargains yourself, and if a saleswoman addresses you informally, pass it off with a gracious smile. Perhaps your kindness may lighten the saleswoman's day just as his cheerfulness lightens your mother-in-law's.

Don't upset a pleasant household by continuing to worry over this matter. It's really a trifling situation and is best left alone. You're lucky to have a good mother-in-law and she's fortunate to have so fine a daughter-in-law. You just need a little more understanding, and that, of course, comes best with passing years.

Dear Miss Dix: I'd like you to print this as a word of encouragement to other young women. I'm 31 years old, with a son 14 by my first marriage. After my first husband and I separated, I did lots of things I shouldn't have done. Instead of someone trying to help me, everyone talked about me until I began to hate everyone. I started to go with a new man, but someone told him things about me that were true — and some that weren't — so we broke off. Then I met another man, and before anyone else had a chance to say something, I told him everything I had done. A month later we were married. Now I am a good mother and wife, with a husband who is trying to help me get my good name back. He is wonderful to me.

Answer: Bravo to you both! Your youthful mistakes were certainly not altogether your own fault. With the proper home atmosphere and family life, you wouldn't have made them in the first place. A firm resolve to overcome the handicap of a tragic youth, and the aid of your fine husband, will soon erase from your mind, and from the minds of others, all memory of the past. Look to the future and, with the lessons you have learned, give your husband and children the advantages of a happy home that you so sorely missed.

Dear Miss Dix: I am a freshman in high school and have a crush on a boy in my class. He's very good looking, but extremely conceited. I'm considered pretty and am told I have a good personality. While he is the serious type, I'm somewhat silly. I have lots of other dates but like this boy more than any other. How can I make him take more notice of me?

Answer: Why bother with a boy who is so conceited he thinks he's conferring a favor on a girl to look at her? Since you have lots of other boy friends, find one who will be more suited to your own personality. A boy who's too serious will soon bore you. While he will find your silliness most irritating, don't waste time mooning over so unsuitable — and unattainable — a prospect.

Highway Dept. Change Takes First Step

Little Rock, April 4 (AP) — The first step toward setting up a small civil service-like personnel system in the state Highway Department has been made.

Highway Director Olen Fullerton and the University of Arkansas yesterday closed an agreement to set up the new system. However, any new personnel procedure will have to be approved by the legislature.

Under the agreement, two university professors — Thomas W. Smith and Darrell L. Spriggs — will set up a system of job descriptions, employee classifications, and salary recommendations. The contemplated new system will be based on merit and job qualification — a miniature civil service.

Personnel problems in the department recently were spotlighted by the Highway Audit Commission.

Fullerton also announced yesterday that an asphalt capping program would be carried out this summer on some of the state's main line highways. Two million dollars has been allotted for the work, he said.

The asphalt will provide a new riding surface which engineers hope will stand up five or six more years under heavy traffic.

Sites of the capping projects haven't been finally selected, but one of them is to be Highway 70 between Pulaski county line and Lanoka — probably about 10 miles.

Teenage Slayer Given Life

Los Angeles, April 4 (AP) — A teenage killer was sentenced to life imprisonment after the widow of a policeman he shot pleaded against the death penalty.

Michael Meehan, a young transient from Denver, admitted the fatal shooting of police St. Marvin W. Haney, 31, in a gun duel after a burglary in February.

Mrs. Elaine Haney asked that Meehan's life be spared.

Superior Judge William B. Roelofs, who passed sentence yesterday, said, "I am very deeply moved by the position of Mrs. Haney in this case."

Meehan had pleaded guilty of murder and robbery. He is believed to be 19, although his exact birth date is uncertain.
